

WHITE WILL MOVE, FOR HE NOW FEELS "UNCOMFORTABLE"

Radical, Tarr'd for Abuse of Bride, Prepares to Quit
Mountain Shack.

MARLBORO, June 1.—It is evident that Bouck White plans to leave his shack in the mountains here. He says he does not feel unsafe but is uncomfortable. White admits that his idea was to found a colony of "liberals." His neighbors describe him and them as "nuts." His twenty-year-old French bride, his treatment of whom resulted in his being tarred and feathered, was to have been the queen of the colony, but she declined a sovereignty that included most of the farm drudgery.

Additional details of the whipping and tarring and feathering of White have come to light.

Taken 23 miles from home he was stripped and a coat of tar and asphalt with feathers and leaves was applied. An undershirt was pulled down over the mass and the men in the party took turns at whipping him with switches cut from the woods. Suggestions were made about a rope and where to string him up, while White again begged his captors to spare his life.

He confessed to burning the American flag and also to beating his wife, according to the stories told. He was left in the woods to make his way home the best he could, after being told his captors came from New York City.

"Mr. White told me his ideal marriage was a spiritual union," declared the young wife to-day, talking partly in broken English and partly in French. "He did not want children. He wanted to write books with me, and said the books would be our children. I had the customary idea of marriage and wished to bring up a family."

"This was the main subject of our disputes. He kept telling me we could have a happy marriage by working together along his ideas for remodeling the world to meet his ideas of life. He wanted to convert me to his theories and make me mistress of a radical colony which he hoped to establish in the mountains up here."

HELD AS SLAYER, DENIES HIS GUILT

Hearing in Case of Alleged "Rope Burglar," Charged With Killing Bachelor.

Henry Bode, known to the New Jersey police as a "rope burglar," was arraigned before Recorder Carsten in Hoboken this morning charged with the murder of Frederick Rueckert, a wealthy bachelor, in his apartment at No. 1127 Washington Street, Hoboken, on the night of May 20, 1920.

At the request of Police Inspector Kiely the case was adjourned and the prisoner remanded to jail until Friday. William Foster, arrested with Bode but not named in connection with the murder, was also remanded until Friday on a charge of breaking into a clothing store and stealing a suit of clothes. Bode is alleged to have been in on that job. Bode said nothing in court to-day, but when the newspaper photographers were taking his picture he protested and declared that "I never murdered anybody."

FINDS LOST WIFE TOMBS PRISONER

Comely Shoplifter, Tired of Humdrum Life, Wanted Jail as New Experience.

The identity of a mysterious woman prisoner of the Tombs was revealed to-day, after a week's confinement, when she was brought to the Court of Special Sessions to be sentenced for shoplifting. She was arrested on May 24 in a 34th Street department store and pleaded guilty to the theft of thirteen yards of ribbon and a handbag.

She gave the name of Lydia Brown and refused to tell anything further of herself. She was a woman of comely appearance, thirty-eight years old and well dressed.

Olaf Gustavson, gardener on the Kellogg Bell estate in Bedford Hills, had been hunting for his wife for a week, and yesterday afternoon went for help to the Bureau of Missing Persons. He was taken to the Tombs and recognized his missing spouse in Lydia Brown. Mrs. Mary Mangin, a probation officer, told the court this morning that she had talked with the woman, who told her that her humdrum life had appalled her, and that her six children had gotten on to her nerves.

Mrs. Gustavson has a good education," said the probation officer, and is ambitious to become a clever fiction writer. She said that she stole that she might be sent to jail for "experience."

The mysterious prisoner was sent to Bellevue Hospital for observation.

Buy ways

The Federal Reserve investigation of retail prices has resulted in a report to the public that there has been a decrease of 50 per cent. in the retail prices of many things and an average decrease of about 87 per cent. on all things.

The report further divulges that the total of sales in New York City this year was 2.5 per cent. below that for the same period last year, though the number of transactions was greater this year by 15.6 per cent. This indicates that the volume of merchandise sold continues to be greater than last year, but the average of each sale is appreciably less as a result of the drastic decrease in prices.

The Washerette

A small but effective washing machine.

It weighs but 6 lbs. and washes the filmiest clothes spotlessly clean in twenty minutes. Merely attach the hose to any faucet by means of the attractive nickel-plated clamp, turn on the water and the Washerette does the rest. It requires no oil, being lubricated by water; and is easily kept clean, for all metal parts are nickel-plated. The tub is enameled and the cylinder is made of white pine. Because of its small size it may be packed in a trunk.
